PATHFINDER '76

Venango Campus/Clarion State College

Oil City, Pennsylvania

Since college is a constant search for new directions, the theme of our yearbook this term is "Paths". Robert Frost's poem, "The Road Not Taken", is an apt commentary on the decisions that must be made by us all.

This year at Venango has been a year of searching for everyone. The paths were varied; some broadly blazed, and others hidden to all but a few. We have grown together by living, working, and partying together. Through this close contact, made possible by a small campus, we have helped each other choose paths. Whether this was done knowingly, or unknowingly, it matters not. The fact remains that we will all leave Venango changed, because each choice we make takes us farther from the way we were.

Diane Wagner
Assistant Editor

The 1975-1976 academic year has been a highly eventful one for Venango Campus. As students, you have shared in the pleasure of watching it grow and in the frustration of wanting to use new facilities even before they fully materialized. You have patiently tolerated noise, mud, dust, inadequate parking, and cramped quarters. But you prevailed over adversity and completed a year of study while the Campus itself completed a year of transformation.

A hillside has been transformed into a library, a gymnasium, an auditorium, a student center. . . . Next, if things go as planned, courses will be transformed into career programs leading to the associate degree. Institutions, like human beings, require periodic transformation — identifiable stages of development — or they perish.

I am pleased to have participated in this process with you. I trust you have advanced in your educational careers in spite of the difficulties of change, real or imagined. Our experience makes clear what Robert Frost had in mind when he defined education as "the ability to listen to almost anything without losing your temper or your self-confidence."

May your future be serenely self-confident!

Thanks!

Throughout this whole year there have been many people who have been more than willing to spend their free time helping with our book. I would like to take this opportunity to thank them. Thank you to Kathy Rodgers for helping to get our book started, Pam Rohrer for picking up where others were unable to continue, John Krapp for his time and patience and his fantastic cover picture and play pictures, and Gary McCaslin for being our advisor.

My very special thanks go to my great staff, especially Diane for her working (as the saying goes) above and beyond the call of duty.

Being at Venango for a year has taught me many things, but I think the most important has been that every moment soon becomes a memory. I hope this book will bring back fond memories for all of you.

Until tomorrow,
Deb
